

Finley Morrow and Henry Bisset

Her mother, Wendy, writes: Finley went to Steiner School from age 3 1/2, first briefly in Edinburgh and then in Ringwood. She left in Class 10 and went to the Ringwood Comprehensive to study Art, Textiles and English A-levels. She then applied to Art Degree Courses without a Foundation with the intention of deferring for a year to travel. She was accepted straight away by Bath University without an Art Foundation as they liked the idea of her travelling as a Foundation Year. She then went to Thailand, Vietnam and Cambodia for 3 months and explored ancient temples and stayed in mud huts with the villagers and saw another way of life. She was especially moved by the street children out there. Now Finley is at Bath University studying Fine Art and seems to be inspired by the feminist movement. She weaves her song writing into her art displays so that they are audio as well as visual experiences (something I think that harks back to her Steiner days and the fusion of artistic learning in all subjects.) She is happy, self-confident and optimistic about life and feels that the school gave her a solid emotional base and positive view of the work that carries her wherever she goes.

Henry Bisset

Henry Bisset is just entering his third year of a Drama Degree at the University of West England (Bristol), and he is absolutely loving it. In his first year he won the 'Rep of the Year Award'. For some 10 years, whilst still at RWS, Henry took part in Forest Forge Theatre. During his first 2 years at Uni, and in order to make ends meet, Henry worked in a restaurant – where he was promoted to Supervisor! He has a special interest in Virtual Reality and thinks of working in education or medical rehabilitation. He has also started a company doing 360 degrees photography.

Henry's photography can be seen on YouTube.
